this year for the eighth time the European Conference on Object-Oriented Programming (ECOOP) in cooperation with Springer is glad to offer the object-oriented research community the ECOOP 2004 Workshop Reader, a compendium of workshop reports pertaining to the ECOOP 2004 conference held in Oslo from June 15 to 19, 2004. ECOOP 2004 hosted 19 high quality workshops covering a large spectrum of hot research topics. These workshops were chosen through a tight peer review process following a specific call for proposals ending on November 30, 2003. We are very grateful to the members of the workshop selection committee for their careful reviews and hard work to put together the excellent workshop program. We also want to thank all submitters accepted or not to whom the workshop program equally owes its quality. This selection process was then followed by a selection of workshop participants done by each team of organizers based on an open call for position papers. This participant selection process ensured that we gathered the most active researchers in each workshop research area and therefore a fruitful working meeting following the tradition of the ECOOP workshop reader. We strove for high quality value adding and open ended workshop reports. The result, as you can judge from the following pages, is a thought-provoking snapshot of the current search in object orientation full of pointers for further exploration of the covered topics. We want to thank our workshop organizers who despite the additional burden did a great job in putting together these reports.

These proceedings deal with the relationship between species composition of freshwater phytoplankton and the trophic gradient. Particular regard is paid to the composite question: what lives where and why? Overview papers report the state of the art and suggest that the trophic spectrum appears to be a probabilistic outcome of several dimensions of variability that impinge upon phytoplankton species selection studies on community structure span all latitudes from those of Antarctica to equatorial Brazil and also include reports on light and nutrient gradients, pH and fish stock effects on species composition seasonal and long-term phytoplankton dynamics in lakes of varying trophic status are also considered. Finally, studies on the taxonomy and autoecology of some groups e.g., volvocales, chrysophytes, and euglenophytes living at the extremes of the trophic spectrum contribute to our knowledge of this usually neglected phytoplankton. This is the first time that a book covers such a topic and it will prove an excellent source of information to anyone working on phytoplankton ecology and ecological indicators. Limnologists in general, algologists, and the technical staff at water authorities will all benefit by reading this book.

proven strategies for reforming STEM education in America's schools, colleges, and universities. One study after another shows American students ranking behind their international counterparts in the STEM fields (science, technology, engineering, and math). Businesspeople and cultural critics such as Bill Gates warn that this alarming situation puts the United States at a serious disadvantage in the high-tech global marketplace of the twenty-first century. President Obama places improvement in these areas at the center of his educational reform. What can be done to reverse this poor performance and to unleash America's wasted talent? David E. Drew has good news and the tools America needs to keep competitive. Drawing on both academic literature and his own rich experience, Drew identifies proven strategies for reforming America's schools, colleges, and universities. His comprehensive review of STEM education in the United States offers a positive blueprint for the future. These research-based strategies include creative and successful methods for building strong programs in science and mathematics education and show how the achievement gap between majority and minority students can be closed. A crucial measure he argues is recruiting, educating, supporting, and respecting America's teachers. Accessible, engaging, and hard-hitting, STEM: The Tide is a clarion call to policymakers, administrators, educators, and everyone else concerned about students' participation in the STEM fields and America's competitive global position.

This book presents one of the first studies of the Renaissance notion of conscience through examining theological manuals, legal treatises, letters, and other sources of the period. It represents one of the few modern studies exploring developments in Scholastic and Renaissance notions of conscience. Synthesizes literary, theological, and historical approaches, it presents case studies from England and the Hispanic world that reveal shared traditions, strategies, and conclusions regarding moral uncertainty. It sheds new light on the crises of conscience of ordinary people as well as prominent individuals such as Thomas More. It offers new research on the ways practical theologians in England, Spain, and France participated in political debate and interacted with secular counsellors and princes.

By bringing together a distinguished group of scholars who have deep, extensive, and complementary knowledge and expertise of the Chinese education system, the work and lives of teachers in China engage in detailed discussions on contemporary issues about teachers and teaching in China. It locates teachers' work and lives in a critical analysis of the political, socio-cultural, ideological, and educational reform contexts and through this demonstrates how teachers in different professional life phases and in different schools are able to retain their vocational strength and commitment for learning and development. Using rich illustrations from real teachers in real primary and secondary schools, this book represents a collection of scholarly writings that build research and practice-informed new knowledge about the nature of teachers' work and lives in China. Through these comprehensive case studies, the book illustrates to policymakers, head teachers, and training and development organizations the importance of sustaining teachers' commitment and wellbeing in their efforts to improve quality and standards in today's Chinese schools. The work and lives of teachers in China...

The Erice International Seminars are multidisciplinary seminars attended by over 100 eminent participants from all fields of science. Each year, a few scientific issues are selected, and experts are invited to present contrasting views during the plenary multidisciplinary sessions of the seminar. Followed by general debates, these sessions offer a unique opportunity for specialists to enlarge their vision of their related fields by being confronted with ideas and suggestions from high-level scientists in complementary domains of science. Associated workshops allow the experts to further refine and process the ideas evoked during the seminar. This year's topics are all actual for instance on climate issues, we have focused on the management of global warming and on new theoretical alternatives to climate modeling. On global monitoring of the planet, we have focused on the US missile defence shield. On energy externalities and waste disposal and the historical dive by Dr. Chilingarov on the North Pole shelf. On the medical side, we have investigated the Alzheimer epidemics and the role of infectious agents in cancer.
